

NALI

North American Language Institute - NALI is a non-profit English Language School located in Huancayo, Peru. The program was developed to help students to improve their speaking ability by interacting with fellow students and North American English-speaking teachers. Potential missionary interns/volunteer teachers need not speak any Spanish, and can stay for as little as 3 months to 2 years.

Goals: The language institute's goals are several-fold: To offer a much desired commodity (English language lessons) to the Peruvian population of Huancayo. Knowledge of English is highly-valued and language classes here are literally over-flowing with students. Our advantage… all of our classrooms will have native English speakers from the USA as teachers – a quality that has already created a buzz among students and high-demand on us! To use Christian volunteers to teach, and most importantly, to build Christian relationships with the students. We seek to foster Christian growth and to nurture our students into a deeper understanding of faith and of Christ. We believe in relational ministry. We want to build relationships with students that will eventually build relationships with Christ. To identify natural leaders from within our student body and develop them into Christian leaders who can lead their own culture and people into meaningful relationships with Christ. In the event that we have significant financial gains, the language institute will financially sustain other ministries through the class fees/”profits”. Our other ministries continue. The language institute does not take the place of other ministries. It is just one more that we are involved in. Minimum requirements Opportunities / Benefits Frequently Asked Questions